Dear Wyonegonic Friends and Family,

We see ourselves as partners with parents and educators to offer tools that will assist our campers for a successful future. A future that is both exciting and daunting. We realize that we need to set children up now to have the skills to succeed later. As part of our blueprint, we hope to inspire campers to be creative and strive for excellence. The important job of educating children for achievement and good citizenship expects passionate role models who want to work with children. Our campers are shaped by many influences in their young lives, including the staff at Wyonegonic. Most children need mentors separate from their parents. They need counselors they can trust who provide guidance and help them prepare for their adult lives by helping them lay the foundation during their youthful days.

The Sudduth family considers it a tremendous privilege to work with dedicated leaders and passionate counselors. Each counselor realizes they are surrounded by others at camp that collaborate to positively impact each child at Wyonegonic. Their daily work is conducted in an atmosphere of mutual respect and support. Our leaders try hard to be a catalyst for inspiring their effectiveness.

One of our strengths is to work as a team. Collaborative leaders value the process and the outcome. Besides exposure to different leaders, we work together with character attributes in mind: humility, empathy, resilience, resourcefulness, optimism, adaptability, responsibility and awareness of self and others.

Many of you have enjoyed a camp experience at some time in your life. If not, you have probably witnessed growth after the camp season in your children. As you reflect, think of the people who were influential along the way, the cabin counselor, the trip leader, key staff who motivated the counselors and other staff. Folks who touched campers by amazing advice on wilderness trips, who laughed with them as they enjoyed deep traditions, who were there to support them during a difficult time and allowed them to be themselves.

As parents you have entrusted your most prized possession to our care. The Sudduth family is exceedingly grateful for your incredible support as we teach your children the belief in the Wyonegonic Experience. We know that many staff and campers, experience life-changing experiences. Every year, we celebrate our legacy and deep commitment to development of leadership, character building and creative program experienced in the simplicity of the wilderness. We believe that attention to little things make a big difference for our campers.

We think campers leave Wyonegonic each summer taking lessons learned with them through their journey of life. Camp is where they discover their future best self. Camp is the compass that points true north. Camp gives them the confidence to pursue dreams.

The Sudduths

The Sudduth Family

Sudduth Family at Wyonegonic

This was the first time in 15 years we had the entire Sudduth Family on Moose Pond. How special that was! The David Sudduth's joined us for the summer from Colorado and David and Becky filled key staff positions. Their son Lucas was a Winona camper and Ellie enjoyed Junior Wyo. Susie Hammond continued in her role as assistant director and Carter, their two year old son, was often the center of attention. Daughter Natalie Grace was born September 16th to Susie and Tom. Carol continues to delegate more responsibility to Steve as he oversees the total operation of Wyonegonic Camps. His daughter Samantha, a senior at Providence College joined us on staff for Family Camp.

Wyonegonic is affiliated with Winona Camp for boys, in Bridgton Maine.
